RAILWAY HOUSE, MILTON, MASS.
The subscriber respectfully informs the public that he has taken a lease of this extensive house, and newly repaired and furnished it throughout with every article necessary for the accommodation and comfort of travellers, convivial parties and boarders.

A beautiful grove with pleasant walks, a garden, swing, &c. connected with the establishment, and its proximity to the city renders it an inviting place for those who desire to spend a short time away from the confusion and hurry of a crowded place of business.

The land will be bestowed with the best of provisions, and such delicacies as the seasons afford. The bar will also be kept supplied with choice wines and liquors. Good stabling for horses.

The Dorchester and Milton line of stages leave for Boston every morning and noon, and return at noon and evening.
At the junction of Merrimack and Friend Streets.
This establishment having now gone through extensive and thorough repairs and additions, will compare with any other public house of its size. It has been furnished from top to bottom with new furniture, bedding, carpeting, &c., and is now open for the accommodation of travellers.

It is the intention to conduct the House after the mode of a first-class hotel, and every effort will be made to please the custom and those who may visit the Warren House the first time.

Stable stables, with pure water, is attached to the establishment.
At the Howard Street House. The subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public, that his business continues to be kept daily for their accommodation.

Dinner is served at 4 o'clock precisely, and furnished with every luxury of the season. Gentlemen wishing to dine at any other hour can be accommodated at the Restaurant. The central situation of this house, in connection with the travel from every quarter—the numerous daily communications with the city—together with the unsurpassed beauty of the town, and its healthy location, are objects too well known to need further commendation.

Gentlemen who are desirous of purchasing or renting this establishment are invited to call and examine the premises. Where the terms will be made known.
LANCASTER HOUSE FOR SALE OR TO LET.
The subscriber, in consequence of the ill health of himself and family, has concluded to relinquish his business, and offers to sell or rent his establishment for a term of years, and give immediate possession.

The House has been recently repaired and fitted up in the most thorough manner. The furniture was new last season, and the house is genteelly furnished throughout, and is in perfect order. The furniture is for sale at a reasonable price. The central situation of this house, in connection with the travel from every quarter—the numerous daily communications with the city—together with the unsurpassed beauty of the town, and its healthy location, are objects too well known to need further commendation.

Gentlemen who are desirous of purchasing or renting this establishment are invited to call and examine the premises. Where the terms will be made known.
PAPER MILL FOR SALE.
For sale in a pleasant village in the town of Leominster, in the county of Worcester, a Paper Mill, with all the machinery, and a good Cylinder Machine, all in good order to do a good business—it is on a first rate stream, commanding a water-wheel with a never-failing fountain of spring water carried into the mill in lead pipes.

Also—a good House and Barn, and about 40 acres of good land—it is seldom so good a chance is offered to young men wishing to establish themselves in that business. The present owner has cleared the property in a very few years, when paper was made by hand, and relinquishes it only on account of ill health—any credit will be given that may be wanted, and a balance paid the first day of June next. For terms, apply to J. WARD SIMMONS, on the premises, or at 116 State st., Boston.

P. S. If not sold by that time, it will be let.
HOUSE TO LET.
On Jamaica Plains, Roxbury, 34 house from the Providence Turnpike, on Back street, within 200 yards of a stopping place of the Dedham Railroad cars—which pass twice a day. Said house has 7 rooms, a cellar, good well of water, and a nice garden filled. The house is in perfect order, and will be let low. Apply at the next house, or at No 24 Court Street, Tudor's Buildings, Boston.

N. B.—Good pasturing for two horses may be had by applying as above.
A Farm very pleasantly situated in the southern part of Middlesex County, near the town of Needham Heights, containing about 150 acres of land, well proportioned into meadows, pasture, tillage, orchard and woodland. The farm is well improved with stone wall, and can be profitably improved with tillage and pasture, being distant about 2 1/2 miles from Lowell. There is on the premises a two-story dwelling house, well finished, shed, wood house, granary and chaise box, and two good barns, all of which are nearly new. The water and barn are supplied with water by an aqueduct from a spring that has never failed, besides there is a well of fine water under cover. For further information inquire of CROSBY & HARWOOD, No 5 Exchange st., or of the subscriber on the premises.

POETRY.
STANZAS.
Would my sad eyes were like the tree
In far off climes, that grieves;
Clouds ever rest upon its brow,
Tears drop from all its leaves;
So, mourning thus, I might obtain
Thy pity for my pain.

Would that my soul were like a lute,
Whose mournful, magic tone,
Could ne'er to others' bosoms speak
But it must touch thine own;
Until thou told'st me, with a sigh,
"Play on, or else I die!"

Would my fond words, too warm, were like
The Alar's heavenly dew;
Sweet as some truant Eden bliss,
And penetrating too,
So deeply vital, thou should'st require
Ever, their vital fire!

Would that affection "strong as death"
And bringing death to me,
Were like the Seraph's glowing prayer,
Which answered must be!
Then mourning from me should depart,
The cherished of thine heart.

The Quadroon Marriage.—A correspondent of the New York Herald gives the following account of an incident which is probably not uncommon in the United States. A Mr R, who was the junior partner of a mercantile house in Charleston, S. C., had formed an intimacy with a beautiful Quadroon girl, at the South, and had bargained according to custom with her parents for her by settling on her mother the stipulated sum of $300, and pledging himself to support her offspring during life. He gave a party on the occasion and called in his friends to witness the contract. Things went on prosperously, until the summer of 1832, when Mr R. paid a visit to New York, where he became acquainted with Miss M, a lovely and accomplished girl, daughter of a highly respectable family in New York city. He soon gained her affections and a matrimonial engagement was consummated between them. Mr R. returned to Charleston in the fall, repaired to his quadroon wife, and advised her, during the tempest of nullification, to forsake her native home and seek protection in the North, where he intended to reside himself, and would join her again. His object in doing this was to forfeit her liberty in the event of her returning to Charleston, which is the penalty of the law of the State which forbids any free person of color from returning to it after having left it. He knew if he could effect this purpose, that he could marry Miss M. and return to Charleston without being molested by her. On the following spring, in compliance with his wishes, she took her three children, pledges of their union, and departed for the North. She stopped in Philadelphia, expecting him to join her, but heard nothing from him till June when he wrote her stating that he was going to England and that she must provide for herself in the best way she could. After visiting England, he returned to New York the September following, married Miss M. and sailed for Charleston with his wife. She was introduced by her husband's partner's wife into the best society at Charleston, but could not divine the cause of the little respect and attention which her husband commanded. At length he brought his wife to New York, where, during his absence, she received a letter from his former wife, informing him of Mr R's villainy, and imploring charity from her hands, to relieve her from poverty and want. This letter was the funeral knell to her happiness, and she is now rapidly tending to the grave with a broken heart. Mr R. is a wealthy man and still retains his interest in the Charleston establishment.

Theatres.—It is still very common in mixed companies to find intelligent individuals who are fond of reiterating the old puritanical notions against the moral tendency of theatrical exhibitions. Such remarks are as unjust as they are common place. The moral purity of theatrical exhibitions will depend entirely on the character and taste of that class of the community from which the theatre receives its support. It is with the theatre very much as it is with the pulpit. As the pastor of a Protestant church will take special care to avoid preaching all such doctrines as are offensive to his congregation, so will the managers of a theatre take special care to avoid exhibiting such dramatic scenes as will offend the most respectable of the theatre-going people. Hence, as in the pulpit, there will be just as much bigotry or liberality recommended as will accord with the views and feelings of the congregation, so in theatrical exhibitions, there will be just as much parity or impropriety as will accord with the views and feelings and taste of the general audience. It follows, therefore, that, if the theatre needs reformation in any place, the true method of effecting a reformation is for the friends of morality and good taste to encourage what they approve by their attendance, and to discourage what they disapprove by their absence. All those classes which keep aloof from the theatre entirely, lose all their power of producing any influence upon the character of its dramatic exhibitions. So long as the majority of the patrons of the theatre are possessed of correct taste and pure moral feelings, the moral influence of the theatre will be proportionately pure. But should the theatre ever be entirely forsaken by the moral classes of the community, and patronized alone by the vicious and impure, then would it become in reality, what bigots pretend it is now, a mere school of vice and corruption. Theatrical entertainments will always exist in one form or another, and in proportion as they are encouraged by the moral classes of the community will their tendency be good or evil.

The Dutchman said he "couldn't see how de people all got a liften upon de city; they all stands or walks upon, and doesn't work at all."—One of his own experienced neighbors explained the mystery thus: "I tells you Hans, dey filds sharten one another, and fild dey calls piziness, and dat's de way dey kites dere liften!"

Three frosts in August we have had this year—a fact without a parallel in the Farmers' Almanack.

S. J. THOMAS, Secretary.

The Greenfield Advocate is again denouncing Mr Henshaw's remarks upon corporations, and says he can only judge his meaning by what he has written. We do not expect him or any one else to judge by any other rule; and if the Editor of the Advocate would quote correctly from the address, which he has not yet done in any of his quotations, we would trust that his readers would not misconceive the meaning. The Advocate says—

"We are utterly opposed to all corporate associations of wealth. The very idea of a corporation implies, as an essential element, the possession of exclusive privileges, of powers which the members of the corporation would not hold, however otherwise associated; of privileges and powers created and existing only by virtue of their corporate character, and which individuals, or associations, not incorporated do not possess. A general act, empowering any body and every body, who choose, to assume corporate powers, would not destroy this exclusive character of corporations, if such an act conferred any facilities for managing business, which are not lawful for those who do not assume the corporate powers it offers. Corporations, under any form which can be devised, are an infringement of the doctrine of equal rights. Corporate associations of wealth are peculiarly anti-democratic and dangerous."

"We do not think that corporations are controllable by the Legislature. The doctrine has always appeared to us to be a sound one, that the charters of corporations are contracts between the State and the corporation, and that it is no less a breach of public faith for the Legislature to revoke a charter, whose conditions have not been violated, than the breach of a private contract is a violation of the principles of private integrity. If the right of the Legislature to create corporations be admitted, the idea of a contract follows of course. Every charter which it grants is a pledge to the corporation of protection in the enjoyment of all the powers it confers, during the term for which it is granted. The Legislature has no control over it beyond its own conditions and limitations. And it makes no difference whether the charter is created by a special act of Legislation, or is derived under the authority of a general law."

Mr Henshaw said "to prohibit all corporate associations of wealth, which are always controllable by the legislative will, would be but yielding to the demand of folly, ignorance or knavery." The Advocate shows its "radical Democracy" by maintaining the Federal doctrine of Judge Story, that corporations are contracts between the State and the corporations which cannot be changed or modified, except by consent of both parties. We cannot see how corporate associations of wealth hold their rights by any firmer tenure than town or parish corporations, or than individuals hold theirs. Few reasonable men will deny the right of the Legislature to modify or repeal any and every town or parish corporation if it see fit so to do. It has exercised the right to control the actions of individuals, it can prohibit their following this or that calling, or permit the citizens to follow certain pursuits with or without a license. It has licensed, and it has prohibited, the selling of lottery tickets and of intoxicating liquors. It licenses theatrical shows. It has prohibited all men from transacting business on specified days. It takes the property of individuals against their consent for public uses, and with all their uncontented exercises of powers, it seems to us absurd to maintain that the rights of corporations of wealth rest on a more secure foundation than those of individuals or of municipal corporations.

If the doctrine of Judge Story, which is that of the Greenfield Advocate, be correct, that corporations and grants are contracts, and cannot be modified by the State, they would indeed be dangerous. Under this law, if the State grant a township of land to Harvard College, it could not thereafter lay a turnpike through it. If it had incorporated the Middlesex canal, it could not let the Lowell railroad cross it. We hold to no such doctrine, nor is it any part of the Democratic creed; it may be "radical Democracy," but it seems to us very much like Federalism. We hold that no legislature can grant away any portion of the sovereign power of the State; and the right to regulate and control corporations, creatures of its own creation, is an essential and an inalienable attribute of that power. We are glad to see the Advocate modify its principles so far that it is now only against all corporate associations of wealth. It is an improvement upon its former doctrines, which went against all associations and accumulations of wealth of whatever kind. The Advocate is against "corporate associations of wealth," because, "the very idea of a corporation implies, as an essential element, the possession of exclusive privileges, of powers which the members of the corporation would not hold otherwise associated."

The possession of peculiar powers do not necessarily imply a public injury. The Constitution of the United States expressly recognizes the right of granting exclusive privileges in certain cases. If the condition of each member of society or of each municipal or other corporation were the same, the same rule might apply to all; but such is not the fact. You cannot apply the law respecting the flowage of the lands on the Connecticut river to the lands of Providence, because the physical condition of the country does not admit of its applicability. The various towns and parishes often require special legislation—exclusive privileges; but we never heard any objection to them. The simple question is, do these corporate powers trench upon the rights of individuals or the public? If they do, then they should be modified—if not, where is the harm? Is property, in masses any more dangerous when held by a corporation, always controllable by legislative will, than when held by an individual or by a number of associated individuals? It is said individual property is not liable for corporate debts beyond the amount of the capital stock, and that hence the public are liable to losses. This is true to a certain extent; but, by the law of limited partnerships, which is a general law, partners are only liable for the amount of capital they put into the concern, and individuals are not liable at all, after a given number of years.

It has been said that our great public improvements, such as the Lowell railroad, the Middlesex canal, &c. &c. which are not liable at all, after a given number of years.

THE ROXBURY INDIA RUBBER COMPANY, having completed all their arrangements, and fully succeeded in their experiments for the manufacture of India Rubber Goods on a new and improved principle, are now ready to execute all orders with punctuality and despatch.

Their cloths, being now prepared without the use of any solvent in the application of the raw material, are more light, durable and elegant. They are not liable to the objection of being tainted against all similar articles hitherto manufactured, of a disagreeable odor. They are entirely without scent, unadhesive and pliable. Having by the newly-discovered process, been subjected to the intensest heat, they cannot be injured under the hottest sun. They are warranted to be perfectly water-proof. A bag, prepared in this way, filled with papers, may be under water for a year, without the slightest moisture of the papers.

As the goods are delivered at and shipped from the manufactory, without the charge of any commission to the Company, and as by the recent ingenious invention, they can be made at less cost, they can be afforded at still lower prices than formerly.
